

Young Australians in International Affairs Unveils 2025 Young Women to Watch List

Young Australians in International Affairs (YAIA) is proud to announce its highly anticipated 2025 Young Women to Watch in International Affairs list, unveiled each year on International Women's Day, celebrating the achievements and contributions of exceptional young women making an impact in international affairs, policy, and diplomacy.

Now in its seventh year, this year's list continues to spotlight inspiring young leaders who are breaking barriers and shaping Australia's international engagement.

The 14 honourees include trailblazers in global health and human rights advocacy, women at the forefront of national security policymaking, and thought leaders in the fight against climate change.

YAIA CEO, Sarah Ramantanis, said "visibility is crucial for young women aspiring to global leadership roles."

"This year's honourees are a testament to the incredible talent and ambition of young Australian women in international affairs. Each of them is forging pathways and contributing to meaningful change in their respective fields, ensuring that future generations see themselves reflected in positions of power and influence, which is essential for achieving true representation and equality on the world stage."

We are proud to recognise the achievements of each recipient and look forward to seeing their continued impact.

YAIA Young Women to Watch events will be held across Australia in Melbourne, Sydney, Brisbane and online, celebrating our 2025 recipients. Learn more and register:

<https://www.youngausint.org.au/events>

ENDS -----

Meet the 2025 Young Women to Watch: <https://www.youngausint.org.au/ywtw2025>

Learn more about the Young Australians in International Affairs Young Women to Watch List: <https://www.youngausint.org.au/youngwomentowatch>

For media inquiries and interviews with YAIA's CEO, Sarah Ramantanis, please contact:

James Mayne, Communications Director: communications@youngausint.org.au